Adopt a birding hotspot

If you have a local birding patch that you frequent, consider "adopting" it. Every time you visit, you can mentally note your PLIRDING milestones. See if you can pick up more trash than on your previous trip, or see if you can get further down the path before you find trash. Over time, you will likely notice that there is less and less trash along your favorite trail.